Dear Ms. Dreebin,

I have registered 2-year community college near my home
(Evergreen Valley College).

I take 2-year of AA (Association of Arts) degree.

Later, I am planning to transfer to a university,
yet certainly, my major is Electrical Engineering.

Thank you.

Mulia

Hello M.,

Good question! The Laude system (Latin for "honors," or "praise") is usually used at the college level. Each school will have their own definition for what Cum Laude, Magna Cum Laude, and Summa Cum Laude correspond with in terms of GPA, but generally it will refer to a 3.5, 3.75, and 4.0 respectively. It may also refer to a certain number of students above a particular ranking.

I'm sorry that is a very vague answer! We don't use that particular system at CAVA, but it may be used at your college or the next institution you attend ☺. What are your plans after high school?

Thank you, Ms. Dreebin.

Btw, what is the difference between Valedictorian and Cum Laude?

Good Morning Mulia,

I just wanted to personally congratulate you on graduating as a valedictorian of your class! Valedictorians graduate with a grade point average of 4.0 or higher - an average of A grades throughout your entire high school career! I am so very proud of you and this awesome achievement!

To commemorate this, you will be given a valedictorian medallion from CAVA. CAVA is sending the medallion in the mail today, and you should receive it within the next few days. Again, congratulations on this incredible achievement! The entire CAVA faculty and staff are so very proud of you!

Best Wishes,

Ms. Sarah Dreebin
